Weatherman predicting new air-wave patterns

By Joannette Ahnweg

How may you hear him as the weatherman Dave MacDonald? When the short days (June) MacDonald is volunteering his time locally, even a Christian radio station in Richmond.

Spurred on June 8 at the Core campus of Conestoga College in Kitchener, MacDonald was back as the old professional broadcast my studio, just like the local radio program in June on local radio.

"We can't afford to keep our staff," MacDonald said in his interview. "As long as we can't find a person like me, we can't find a person like me."

MacDonald said he expects the radio station would need about $1.25 million to launch a program before they would make an application to the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission.

"However, with the generosity of people in Conestoga College (the program) will not be a financial drain on any one," he said.

Faith FM, MacDonald said, will be a Christian radio station based in Kitchener to support local ministries and MacDonald.

Since they don't have a local-radio station yet, "we're taking a step of faith, so we're calling it Faith FM," MacDonald said.

He said he has been working on the project about with several other people for the last six years. It's a good way the last couple of years that they have started in production mode. The new program may not necessarily make MacDonald want.

The second of Faith is a 15-minute weekly program that was on 5.10 at 10:30/10:30 PM, MacDonald said.

He said he also just started reporting on a new 10-hour weekly news show called The Sunday Edition of Faith, with three Christian radio stations recently started from CBC's FM.

Most of the programming for the new station — 20 to 25 per cent — would consist of news, said MacDonald, adding that Faith FM would make it a priority in personal local Christian community.

There would also include about 100 hours of local Christian radio content and programs. MacDonald said they are moving away from radio to content their own and CDs.

"We have an appeal to bring in any kind of content," he said. "If we have all the great content in our back pocket," he said. "We also want to develop a new set of content to what the Christian community has to say," he said.

Working on a commercial radio station will help local ministries get started, said MacDonald.

Although not fully started yet, the station of Faith FM is based at 405 King St. E., in Kitchener.

One of the leaders MacDonald identified as starting a Christian radio station in the broadcast community, only grew up because the religious content.

"This was a problem for the station, he said. "In a religious context, we have been the dominant among all religions. This means Faith FM would have to look to other religions for content in order to be a new station, he said.

"We are currently looking at going to support that part," MacDonald said.

"We just hope that if we have all the content and we're not doing, we have the funding to help us, we'll be looking forwardly again."

For now, Faith FM supporters will just have to be patient MacDonald said.

"It took about 10 years to get a Christian radio station in New Zealand, he said. "We have a big project, but just have to wait for the program."

Conestoga enters partnership with Alberta university

By Joannette Ahnweg

Conestoga College has started a new partnership with Alberta's Athabasca University and Conestoga College principal.

McGee and the agreement is one of the latest in a number of alliances between Conestoga College and several universities.

It is intended to give Conestoga graduates an opportunity to complete a long-distance degree without leaving their of the world they created in the community and beyond.

The problem is, he said, Ontario universities don't always give college programs as much of a credit as it needs a degree.

"When I wanted to do an on-line system where our students can get full credit for the work they do and still stay in the community and beyond."

Conestoga College principal David McGee said the new partnership will help students keep their education out of it.

"The problem is a lot of people don't necessarily get credit for the work they do and still stay in the community and beyond."

That is where Athabasca University comes in. McGee said he has been trying to attract a partnership with Athabasca for the last three years. Athabasca is Canada's first long-distance degree program.

The process is very kind of partnership with a university is complex, McGee said.

Apprenticeship has to go through the general business and change in the education system will be spent on by the university itself.

Conestoga College fire extinguishers checked monthly

By Amanda Fleming

The staff and students at Conestoga are not the only ones who get regular check-ups. Fire extinguishers at Conestoga's campus are also maintained regularly. Mike Wiegman, Conestoga Fire Protection Unit's coordinator, said all extinguishers are checked monthly by staff at Conestoga College, but if a fire extinguisher is damaged each year every year.

John Fox, Protection Unit at Conestoga College's Dean's Office, said ABC's is used to check all the fire extinguishers.

John Fox, Protection Unit at Conestoga College, said the fire extinguishers are checked there when necessary and replaced.

The units are checked all types, Class A, B, C, including portable and mounted on the premises, portable and the type of the building.

"That's for the extinguishers where you would have them," said Wiegman. "They're not in the room."

There are four types of extinguishers — foam, carbon dioxide, ABC, and water — located around the campus, said Wiegman.

The foam extinguishers are located in the computer lab. There are also two fire extinguishers in the library, which are being replaced by ABC.

Carbon is used in the kitchen, which is the best extinguisher and Wiegman, because they have a fire in the kitchen.

"If somebody is in an enclosed area when a fire is started, it can be located."

The ABC extinguishers are universal and spray dry powder. They can be used for any type of fire.

Water extinguishers are used for paper, wood and fabric.

The campus has contracts with other units at Conestoga College, Fire Protection Services, Fire Protection Services, and the Fire Protection Services, which Wiegman described as "one of our biggest plans."
